The simple lesson of this book is that creativity offers hope. Through charming illustrations and playful twists, authors Sean Foley and Lukas Birk connect their previous publications, 'Afghan Box Camera', 'Photo Peshawar', and 'Indian Minute Camera Photographers', to tell the story of how the craft also offers avenues for experimentation and fun. Filled with tricks of the trade from box camera photographers in Afghanistan, Pakistan, and India, not to mention a wealth of fascinating archival portraits and images, it explores the niches of street photographers' work along this ancient trade route while leaving space to show the playful side of their image-making.
